INTESTINAL MALROTATION RESEARCH SUMMIT

APRIL 17 – 18

University of Oklahoma Health Sciences
Hudson College of Public Health
Oklahoma City, OK (with virtual option)

Sessions for Surgeons:

Intestinal malrotation is a rare but serious condition that is poorly understood. Our Intestinal Malrotation Patient and Clinician Team has created a Patient-Centered Comparative Clinical Effectiveness Research Agenda to address our research priorities.

Join our two half-day summit to learn more about our multidisciplinary and patient-centered research priorities and ways to collaborate in research.

Topics include:

- Findings from our IMPOWER patient registry and TriNetX analyses
- Patient-centered research methods
- Feeding challenges after Ladd's
- Disorders of gut-brain interaction
